It's late evening and I'm riding a bus on my way home.

a pretty girl sat beside me, I can't get my eyes off of her.

One of the wheels burst.

The bus driver hit the brake immediately causing inertia to push passengers a bit.

We all went out since the bus wheel need to be replaced.

I saw the girl and she have a bruise on her left eye. must be because she hit her head on the front seat earlier.

I approached her and gave her a band aid.

"Miss, this will help." while I'm pointing on my left eye.

It started raining.

The girl opened her umbrella

She said, "come over or you'll get drenched."

"It's dark and it's raining", I said.

She smiled and said, "my home's just a kilometer away."

"Let me walk you home", I offered.

We are now in front of her house. It's a perfectly huge palace.

I don't know this exist here.

"Thank you for your kindness today". She smiled while giving me her umbrella.

"I just lend it to you so return it to me. okay?"

She then kissed me on the cheek.

Then ran inside the gate without saying anything more.

Next morning, I woke up on my bed with her umbrella nearby.

I went to their home to return the umbrella.

But what I saw is a house in ruins.

I saw an old lady, she must be a passerby. I asked her "what happened here?"

She looked at the direction I'm looking and said, "They say, it was once the most prestigious palace before, but as far as I remember, this place was always like this".
